

Dealer Week Policy Regarding Children

Dealer Week is a trade show for marine retailers and those who serve and support them, offering education, networking and exhibits. A large number of marine organizations are family-run concerns in which minor children grow up in the business and are involved in day-to-day operations. Therefore, MRAA welcomes minors to experience the exhibit floor and seminars under the supervision of their parents or guardians during show hours, as long as they can do so without causing disruption.

- Children are not permitted on the exhibit floor during set-up or tear-down.
- No children shall be admitted into Dealer Week without a parent or guardian.
- Any parent who wishes their child to attend Dealer Week with them is required to complete a liability waiver.
- One child under 10 years of age will receive complimentary attendance when accompanied by one registered adult. Children 10 years and older will be required to register and pay the adult rate.
- All children attending Dealer Week must be under the direct supervision of their registered parent or guardian at all times.
- All persons on the exhibit floor and in the seminar rooms are expected to elicit a demeanor befitting a business atmosphere. The parent is responsible to ensure that the child does not disrupt the experience of attendees and exhibitors. If you are supervising a child, you are asked to please remove the child from the seminar or expo hall at the first signs of disruptive behavior. Any person of any age causing a disruption who does not excuse themselves will be asked to leave. We welcome you to return as soon as you and the child are ready.
- Some attendees have been known to carry infants or bring toddlers. Please be aware that there may be running marine equipment and machinery present on the trade floor, and that small children may not understand the dangers these devices represent. As a parent or guardian, you are responsible for your child's safety.
- All Dealer Week attendees take heed of the following disclaimer:
Dangers from marine industry equipment and other hazards typical to an event of this nature can be expected to be present at Dealer Week. No persons who might lack sufficient understanding of safety risks involved from such equipment and hazards should attend this event. Dealer Week, its hosts, suppliers, employees, landlords, and assigns accept no liability for injuries, losses, or theft sustained as a result of attendance. By attending, you indicate that you agree to these terms.
